About the Family

From an early age Brandon felt called to missions. After joining the Army at the age of 18 and several deployments he found himself back in Texarkana, Ark., where he was born and raised.

Caitlin on the other hand grew up in the Appalachian Mountains of southwest Virginia. After she graduated college she moved to Texarkana with her family and started attending a local church. They met one Sunday in the college class where Brandon was teaching. Brandon found out that his grandmother was from the same area as Caitlin and that's how their story began. They were married in November 2015.

Both were working on their master's degrees, and once Brandon completed his he began searching for a job. Yet he still felt called to the mission field. While attending chaplain school (CHBOLC) in the summer of 2016 he was reading the North American Mission Board endorsement manual and stumbled upon military church planting. He knew right away that God was calling them to plant a military focused church.
