About the Family

Jeff was raised in rural Alabama by parents dedicated to the church and to serving God. Though involved in church his whole life, it wasn't until he was 17 that Jeff came to faith in Christ. A year later while in college, Jeff began leading worship at church and campus ministries and, through this experience, perceived a calling to vocational ministry. Jeff has led worship at a large church in Birmingham and two church plants. Now, having developed a passion for the Scriptures and for teaching, he feels compelled to start a new church.

Kelly, Jeff's wife of 13 years, is a great support and sees herself as a partner in ministry. Further, she is a talented musician and teacher. As Jeff puts it, "She makes up for my weaknesses as a gifted administrator." This is proven in her responsibilities of homeschooling their five children.

The Belcher family loves to spend time together making music, having outdoor adventures, watching movies, reading, good Southern food and sweet tea.

About the Church Plant

If you spend any time in Canton, you'll see young people everywhere—moms and dads taking babies for a stroll, children shopping with their parents, couples taking a jog and young professionals walking their dogs or frequenting the local restaurants. Jeff and Kelly believe they and the CoH team are built to impact these people, and Church of the Harbor is structured to reach them.

CoH invests a great deal of energy and resources into children's ministry as well as into building worship gatherings that are modern, warm and inviting. Most important, all this is centered on the teaching of God's truth. CoH began gatherings in November 2014 and is working toward officially launching in September 2015.
